Introduction

We live in a world of constant change where the acceleration of the economic exchanges accompanies that of the internet revolution which hustles our modes to communicate and our way of transmitting information. The port city as Baku is affected as they are in the middle of these upheavals. The port changes, it is modernized and adapted, but remains very often a closed world which should from now on be made again accessible to the inhabitants, local and international companies, trade and diplomatic missions and people from the port city of Baku and all over the Azerbaijan.

WHY WE NEED IT

At the same time, cities struggle to define themselves and compete in national and international stages to attract capital, inhabitants and socio-cultural resources. The interaction between them is a two-way street, in which both have to be open to give and receive inputs for their mutual development. In this context we can see that, in the relation between city and port, local and international business community members (companies, chambers of trade), the citizens play an increasingly important role.

Further on, in the last ten years we have assisted to significant changes in our society. The communication between individuals and institutions has mutated from official channels to the informal social networks. The available knowledge has increased exponentially and the general curiosity about the world we live in has grown to unprecedented levels. All these changes have affected the port-city-businesses-citizen relation, evolving from static positions to dynamic interactions.

A s t o r y

bout Teambuilding

In this context Baku International Sea Trade Port (Port of Baku) is convinced that the Team Building International concept which is the product of Port of Baku International Cooperation Department has become a formidable tool in the search of appropriation of the port by the business community in face of and the development of a more sustainable relationship between port and local, international companies, trade and diplomatic missions for the better networking, cooperation and communication.

In the frames of “Port Community Care” project which aims to strengthen bilateral ties of cooperation and networking between the Port of Baku and the members of local and international business community we are planning to conduct “Corporate Kitchen” Team Building on each Saturday and Sunday in Shamakhi region of Azerbaijan.
